SHORT STORY AT FISH PIER TODAY

ONLY SEVEN SMALL BOATS WITH MIXED FISH ON HAND—
MARKET DULL.

Dealers on the Boston fish pier had the quietest day for many weeks today. When the opening bell rang, only seven small boats from shore fishing with mixed fish were in the dock. There wasn't a single arrival from off shore and no sworders or mackerel catchers.

Total receipts were 78,300 pounds of mixed fish. The market was dull. The Yarmouth steamer brought 63 swordfish yesterday.

Portland News.

Landing groundfish at Portland, Me., Tuesday were the Helen & Mae, 14,000 pounds; the Elsie, 10,000 pounds; and the Hortense, 1000 pounds. The Gloucester vessel Catherine Burke brought in 4000 pounds of mackerel.

Labrador Fishery.

If it is any satisfaction in the face of the present disturbed marketing conditions, there appears every probability of a Labrador voyage not much more than half last year's.

Up to yesterday reports stated fishing was also negligible and that continued fogs or northeast winds made operations difficult. Many traps and nets are reported lost in a gale of 10 days ago.

The number of vessels fishing on Labrador is stated to be 80 fewer than last year.

Capt. Connors of the S.S. Kyle, which arrived yesterday from Labrador reports the trap fishery is now over for the season from Battle Harbor to Wolf Islands. All along this section of the coast the fishery has been poor with the exception of Wolf Islands. Last week at the latter place the traps averaged between 20 and 25 barrels. The reason for the poor fishery is that when the fish struck in the weather was bad. The fishing fleet which operated on the southern part of the Labrador are now proceeding north. Several were reported to be well fished. There is plenty of herring on the coast for bait, and fishermen are hoping to get better returns with hook and line. N. F. Trade Review.
